This 9 day-program is designed for people interested in integrating NVC values in education. We will practise on creating learning communities that cultivate mutual respect, cooperation, compassionate interactions and engaged learning.

In this program you will practise to be a role model for clear communication - one of our most important life skills. Learning to listen, learning to speak up for what you need and want, stating your opinion and your personal arguments based on needs, verbalise your dreams, are all helpful skills when forming a life-enriching learning climate and guiding basic democracy.

This includes also to foster self-care, to lead forth everyone's potential and learning from your mistakes without losing self-respect.

As a participant, you will join a team of experienced trainers dedicated to cultivating NVC in the field of education.

Some themes that we will attend to:

- Deepen the understanding of what Marshall Rosenberg named as “mutual education.”
- Co-create a safe and supportive learning environment
- Making and breaking rules with care
- Balance between clear leadership and taking children’s point of view in
- Resolve conflicts and prevent or de-escalate violence
- Daily life mediation with young people
- Support children to be motivated by their eagerness to learn
- Learn from experiences of NVC projects in schools

Come and share, learn, contribute to a community of parents, teachers, educators, counsellors practitioners and trainers!
